Doing Memory Research

New Methods and Approaches

- Showcases the diverse ways of doing memory work, including via different media, and engagement with memory's performativity, its affect, its visuality and its sounds
- Offers a range of interpretative approaches that are attentive to uncovering and explicating the politics of memory and how memory links present day communities and places to the past, as well as proffering answers to why these links may exist
- Illustrates how the diversity of disciplinary perspectives coalesce around a growing engagement with non-representational, more-than-human and digital approaches in their methodological remit
- Fills an existing gap by offering a comprehensive and collective approach to memory res

Memory studies is a nascent and multidisciplinary research field, drawing from an impressive array of qualitative investigative methods deployed to do memory research. The authors in this collection offer an explicit engagement with the 'doing' of memory research. The contributions demonstrate how attention to methodology reveals rich insights about memory and its links to place and identity.
